Flowing series chair

When storm and stillness share one breath--
A phoenix-trace burns time to death.
Caught in glass forged from lightning's kiss:
Your veins hum hymns to shattering bliss,
Liquid thunder tamed in bronze--
Where all that flies is never gone.

Sparse branches etch the winter air--
Willing isolation, a solitary prayer.
Wind stirs the void, yet calm stays bound,
Where heart's pendulum turns without sound:
Stumbling hours in measured beat,
Deep-shallow tides where feelings meet.
A leaking hour, a crack unseen--
Time crumbles through walls once evergreen.

Ooze bathtub

Like a well of untouched light--
Ripples write the wind's soft word.
Silver-scales of trembling bright
Rise where breath and beam are blurred:
Each wave a baptism new,
Washing stone and soul alike--
Till the fractured world shines through
Pearl-strung pools no stain can strike.

Nature coffee table

History without weatherings—weightless lore;
Perfection unchiselled by years—but vain gloss.
Here, where hand and nature and time engrave,
Stone learns its truth from the cracks it gave:
Born raw, wrought whole--
A grace unforced as first dawn's scroll.

Cross coffee table

When mist and morn are one--
Abide where no roads run.
Let the fray beat outside the gate:
A single clarity translates
All noise to silence, storm to bay--
Heart-moon reflected in no-wave.
